

Color a Sturgeon!

Sturgeons are very large fish that live in coastal rivers like the James. Some species can grow up to 14 feet long! Today sturgeon are endangered, but in the 17th century they were an important food source for both Virginia Indians and the earliest English colonists. Unlike most other fish, sturgeon do not have scales—instead, they are protected by bony plates called scutes. Archaeologists have found many thousands of these scutes at Jamestown.

Once you have finished coloring your sturgeon have an adult show you what it looks like in real life by visiting: <https://historicjamestowne.org/jr-kids-at-home> #ColorOurCollections
